Linking Policy

In general, you do not need permission to refer to or link to the STRUCTURE web site. However, you should not link to this site in a manner or context that is false or misleading – for example, within a frame that is not clearly labeled, or in the body of an unsolicited bulk or commercial e-mail message.

The above applies equally to links to our site's main (home) page and "deep links" to individual pages within our site. Deep links should be used with some caution, since individual page URLs are apt to change over time. STRUCTURE is not responsible for "broken links" as a result of updates we make to our website.

Framed links to this site, and links to non-HTML pages on this site, are strongly discouraged. Technical countermeasures may be implemented to enforce this preference.

www.structuremag.org may post links of interest to our readers. Links posted on our website are at the sole discretion of the NCSEA and the STRUCTURE Editorial Board.

Thank you for your interest in "linking" to STRUCTURE's website. We ask that you notify us of the web address of the page where the link resides, when the link is in place and active.

Thank you.
